Overall, CUSB offers conducive environment, adequate infrastructure support and innovative pedagogies to nurture the students.

About the Department of Bioinformatics

The Department of Bioinformatics under the School of Earth, Biological and Environmental Sciences (SEBES), is dedicated to the interdisciplinary study of biology, computational science, and data analysis. Established in 2011 with a vision to bridge the gap between biology and information technology, the department offers cutting-edge programme and research opportunities that cater to the growing demands of the modern biological sciences.

About the Workshop

This two-day workshop aims to provide basic level training in the techniques of computer-aided drug designing particularly focusing on structure-based approaches such as molecular docking, simulation and dynamics. Participants will learn key aspects of modeling, drug design and molecular dynamics through lectures demonstrations and hands-on sessions with expert guidance using widely used software in the area.
